About GCGC

The Global Chinese Golden Chart (GCGC) is a Chinese music pop chart co-founded by the seven largest Chinese radio stations worldwide, including Fairchild Radio (Canada), Hit FM (Taiwan), China National Radio (China) and other Chinese radio stations from Asia and America. Covering the vast number of Chinese speaking listeners around the world, GCGC reflects the tastes and preferences of today's Chinese music lovers and serves as a spring board for artists to gain global exposure.

About GCGC North America Concert

The previous Global Chinese Golden Chart Awards Concert, held in Taipei in 2011 in front of 11,000 audience, was a huge success. To celebrate the 20th Anniversary of Fairchild Radio, the 2013 Global Chinese Golden Chart Awards will have its first ever North American concert taking place in Vancouver at The Centre on Friday, May 17, 2013. The artists who are confirmed to perform include Jolin Tsai, Will Pan, Lala Hsu, Aaron Yan, Yisa Yu and Hu Xia.

Jolin Tsai 蔡依林

The Dancing Diva

One of Asia's biggest stars, Jolin Tsai is a beloved pop princess who has released more than a dozen award-winning albums, selling over 23 million records worldwide. She is the number one highest earning artist in Taiwan, having made US$23.6 million in the year 2012 alone. Jolin has just released her 12th album "Muse" last September.

Don't be deceived by Jolin's slender frame. Despite being just 5'2" and weighing around a hundred pounds, this petite diva is a sultry sex kitten with amazing athletic abilities. Famous for incorporating Olympic level gymnastics in her dance moves, her version of pole dancing is nothing short of jaw-dropping.

The renowned French media iConcerts shot a documentary of Jolin and here is a 12-min trailer with English subtitles:

Will Pan 潘瑋柏

The Multi-talented Genius

Will Pan breaks the stereotype of the good-looking Taiwanese male pop idol by proving that he can sing, rap, compose, dance, host, act, design clothes and develop software, all in the same breath, if you insist. Nickname Pan Shuai (handsome Pan), the American born Will has released nine albums up to this date, all with critical acclaim.

In addition to having a successful singing career, Will hosts TV programs and acts in romantic comedies, winning the "Best Leading Actor in a TV Series" at the 2011 Golden Bell Awards (Taiwan's Emmy Awards). In recent years, he started his own fashion label and founded a software company developing mobile games. Yes, mobile games. His company's creations - "Fish Off", "Pig Rockets" and "MeWantBamboo 2" – had over 15 million downloads the last time we checked.

Aaron Yan 炎亞綸

The Super Idol

As the youngest member of the Taiwanese super band "Fahrenheit", Aaron is no stranger to young girls screaming for him and worshipping him. After all, "Fahrenheit", the groundbreaking sensation that started in 2005, is still the most popular of all the Mando-Pop boy bands in Taiwan. In 2010, Aaron was ready for a solo career, his first concert selling out in 18 minutes! On his two EPs "The Next Me" and "The Moment", Aaron revealed a darker and more mature image impressing even the toughest music critics. Aaron proved he has more than just a pretty face and that he could withstand the transition from boy to man.

Yisa Yu 郁可唯

The Ballad Princess of China

Born and raised in the province of Sichuan, China, Yisa broke into the music industry by sheer will power. She had already entered and failed a couple of singing competitions before making it to the final round of "Super Girl", an American Idol-style singing competition. Although she was knocked out after making it to the final four, her elimination created a public outpouring of support and music labels were quick to recognize her talent and charisma, making her the first of the contestants to release her own album. Since then she's gotten several chart-topping ballads under her belt including the tear-jerking theme song of the popular drama "The Fierce Wife", granting her the title of 'Ballad Princess of China' by the media.

Lala Hsu 徐佳瑩

The Creative Shooting Star

A former nurse, Lala entered Taiwan's famous singing competition "One Million Star" in 2008 and won with an almost perfect score from a panel of harsh judges. Since then she has worked non-stop, writing songs for herself as well as for others. That said, her vocal performance is not to be dismissed as she was crowned the "Best Female Singer" at the 2012 China Music Chart Awards. Amongst the rare breed of creative and original female singer-songwriters, Lala is an exceptional shooting star, having acquired superstardom in a mere 4 years.

See her performance at the 2012 Golden Horse Award (Taiwan's Oscars), in which she sang a medley of movie theme songs paying tribute to that year's Best Director nominees:

Hu Xia 胡夏

The Phenomenon

Hailing from Guangxi in the Southern part of China, Hu Xia's name is a symbol of his parents' love for each other – his father's surname is Hu while his mother's surname is Xia. Hu Xia knew he was born to sing at a very young age. At 19, he won the regional prelim of Taiwan's "One Million Star" singing competition and travelled to Taiwan for the final, his first time out of China. Despite the culture shock and feeling lonely at times (for the excruciating knockout competition lasts many months—that is, if you don't get eliminated), Hu Xia won the title of Champion and was quickly signed by a music label. His most famous work is "Those Were the Years" which is the theme song for the phenomenal movie "You Are the Apple of My Eye". The film and the song depict "everybody's first love" and Hu Xia's vocal performance was highly praised. The MV of the song has received 34 million views on YouTube.
